A screenshot of a Padlet board titled "Suggestions for CMV Messages" by Jyoti Sood. The board features 14 white cards with text suggestions and feedback icons (thumbs up, heart, and comment). The suggestions include: "Message testing" (contacting national organizations), "You could have and I Tera rice app on all the hygiene practices that might be fit a pregnant woman" (jeopardy game), "WIC" (work with WIC clinics), "CMV is the most common virus most pregnant persons have never heard of -- would you like to know more?" (investigator role), "At every step of this journey yourself (as an investigator) WHO needs to do WHAT differently?" (investigator role), "Could use the impact of hygiene practices on Covid and build on this" (hygiene plus), "Infographics" (use infographics), "You can be tested for CMV -- a commercial virus that can affect your baby- would you like to be tested with a simple blood test?" (commercial virus), "Most doctors are lost with the whole concept of asymptomatic versus symptomatic cmv" (MD education), "What cCMV looks like over a lifetime. If my child has cCMV what will be their health challenges when they're 10, 25, 40, etc? Does it predispose them to other diseases? Will their children also have CMV?" (lifetime challenges), "Most women that get CMV do not get sick and do not know they caught the virus" (women not getting sick), "Provide links to resources for more information ie: links to cmv Canada, parent support groups etc" (resources), "Don't use baby wipes to clean up. Use soap and water" (baby wipes), "Who is your audience... scope creep" (audience), and "No really, wash your hands!" (handwashing).
